Duty Roster

Someone sent me a video the other day in an email with the subject, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them." When I pressed play on the YouTube clip an empty table in an all white room took over the scene. Gradually, different sets of two children faded in and out of focus. If you looked closely you could see a lunch box in front of each of them. As the video continued the children opened up their lunches only to discover in each case that only one of the kids had anything to eat. But the most amazing thing happened. As each child realized their neighbor's lunch box was empty they cut their sandwich in half giving the other side to their new friend. Every time.

I suppose the purpose of the video was meant to make us wonder what happened. What happened between the innocence and built-in-generosity of our early years and the self-centered hoarders we have too often become? What happened to the children that shared their lunch at the table that made them afraid to share spare change with a helpless person on the street? I was supposed to wonder what happened to our generosity.

But I came to an entirely different conclusion.

As I watched the video over and over again, I wondered not about the motives of the children or what happened to sharing. Instead the question I kept asking myself again and again was: What happened to the table? You see the real problem the video shows is not that grown ups are less generous, but that we rarely if ever share a table with those who need us. I'm willing to bet that even the most selfish people we know would share a lunch that had been given to them with the person sitting next to them with nothing. The problem is, most of us with means rarely if ever have to sit next to the one who needs our help the most. We live in different neighborhoods. We go to work at different times. We eat at different restaurants. Even our churches tend to under-reflect diversity in income, as too many Christians are uncomfortable worshiping with people whose lives do not resemble theirs.

The real problem, you see, is not that we do not give enough, but that we do not share a table enough.

Just days before his death Jesus gathered with his disciples while Mary of Bethany took a pound of costly perfume and anointed Jesus' feet. The perfume was so extravagant that it was worthy nearly a year's wages for a worker. Some of his disciples wanted to know why Jesus let such costly perfume be used on his feet when it could have been sold and the money given to the poor (John 12:3-5). I think I know why. Because Jesus knew that the way to tackle poverty and injustice isn't our convenient version of keeping our distance and throwing money at a problem, but by addressing hunger and poverty the way he modeled for us.

--By sharing a hillside with those in need of food.

--By washing the eyes of a blind beggar at the temple.

--By walking with the poor, the oppressed, and the stranger.

--By sharing a table.

We are called to give. We are called to share our food with the hungry, our water with the thirsty, our money with the poor, and our homes with the homeless. But may we never forget how we are called to give. We are called to give like Jesus who doesn't bestow his mercy and grace on us from heaven, but by becoming man, walking with us, and sharing our table. May we share a table too.

We pray for all those who are struggling with drug and alcohol addictions and we also pray for the victims of all forms of abuse. We continue to keep our Servicemen and women who are serving at home and overseas in our prayers.

From Mr. Chris: Hope's Youth Director!

So who is giving something up for Lent?

I remember being a kid and every year during Lent we had to give something up. Some years it was giving up ice cream or sweets. Others it was giving up facebook or social media. The worst was giving up TV for forty days (my family and I became real close during that time.) Every year, as we enter into lent, it is a time for us to remember the sacrifice Jesus made during those forty days and forty nights. Whether its giving up meat on Fridays, or giving up something we cant live without for that time, we try and remember the sacrifice Jesus made. But what if instead of giving things up for Lent we decided to take on something else instead. Instead of giving up sweets we decided to eat healthy instead. Or instead of giving up social media we instead decided to say one nice thing to each of our family members everyday. In the book of Isaiah I think this is the type of sacrifice God wants during Lent

"Is this not the fast which I choose, To loosen the bonds of wickedness, To undo the bands of the yoke, And to let the oppressed go free And break every yoke? "Is it not to divide your bread with the hungry And bring the homeless poor into the house; When you see the naked, to cover him; And not to hide yourself from your own flesh?" (Is. 58:6-7)

As people of Christ we understand the sacrifice that Jesus made, while we can give things up to remember that sacrifice I also think it is important to do what is says in Isaiah. God is calling us to care for one another, to Love God and Love our neighbor as ourselves, during this season of lent and at all times. So for the rest of this season my challenge is to you to become a little more selfless and to share the good news of God through just not your words and sacrifice, but through your actions as well.

An Update from Our Seminarian Jim and Isabel Vitale:

Things are going well for Isabel and I in Minnesota. We are surviving our first winter out here. We have really lucked out in terms of snow, getting hardly any (I know that is a sore subject for you all, considering how much you've gotten!). However, there is no shortage of cold fronts out here. There have been many days where the wind chill has been 35 below. So we stay inside as much as we can and we do alright. Life in western New York prepared us well for this wimpy little winter!

Things in seminary are going well. I'm enjoying life at Luther. I pulled off some good grades in the first semester and learned quite a lot. Many of the professors seek to form close relationships with their students in and outside the classroom, and so it has been fun to get to know many of them as both teachers and mentors. I took a class on the Lutheran Confessional Writings (i.e. the Book of Concord, Small Catechism, etc.) and loved it. It was very affirming to delve deeper into the theology of our denomination and find I love it all the more. I have also taken a few youth ministry classes with Andy Root, a talented youth ministry theologian. I have learned a ton their and love learning from him. The nice part about academic life at Luther is that they try to contextualize as much as they can. So while I'm taking lots of academic-theological courses, I'm also working out in the community as a youth director. Most of my classes require that I take experiences from that ministry and integrate them into my school work, and vice versa. It helps to provide a more well-rounded, contextual education.

Isabel and I have found the Luther community to be very welcoming and we have made some new friends. Between her work and my seminary life we don't have tons of time to spend out on the town, but we take advantage of the time we do get. The Twin Cities is a pretty cool place. There are lots of little coffee shops, concert venues, restaurants, and museums. We live walking distance from pretty much anything we'd ever need, a very different lifestyle from life in Houghton! During the summer and fall we shopped at the massive St. Paul farmer's market. Although the cities are quite big, they somehow manage to maintain a (albeit kind of strange) "small-town" sort of feel. I have been told there are over 70 municipalities that comprise the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

I continue to work as the youth director at a church in Minneapolis called the University Lutheran Church of Hope (I just can't get away from "Hope!"). The church is located just off the University of Minnesota Twin Cities campus, which has 40,000 students across three sub-campuses. This congregation has provided me a wonderful place to learn and grow. They have a fairly academic feel, with lots of professors and retired pastors in the congregation. I spend the majority of my time with the high school youth, but I also teach confirmation classes occasionally. It is a great place to work, though I must say I miss Hope, Arcade immensely. Isabel and I reminisce about our time with you quite frequently. Your generosity, hospitality, and caring community are deeply special and unmatched. God is doing truly great work through you all!

In addition to serving as youth director, I am also fulfilling my Clinical Pastoral Education unit this semester. In CPE I spend my time as a hospital chaplain, praying and talking with patients. I'm stationed at one of the biggest hospitals in the state, and I'm currently working as one of the chaplains in the heart unit. I work there nearly 30 hours a week so it is a major time commitment, but I really love it. It can get pretty challenging, but I'm learning a lot about myself, my relationship with God, my relationships with others, and my call to ministry. Some part of me feels I could be a hospital chaplain long-term in the future, though for now I gladly continue to pursue pastoral, congregational ministry.

Isabel is doing well. She continues to work as an assistant preschool teacher with 35 three-to-five-year-olds. It seems to be a bit tiring for her but she enjoys it. She is currently looking into grad school options, favoring some kind of food-studies program. There are many to choose from and she is taking her time to discern which might be best for her. In the long run we still hope to own and operate a farm, possibly in conjunction with a congregational ministry.

As I said, we really miss you all at Hope. We've carved out a good life here in the Twin Cities, but we remember often our time spent with you. I hope you are all doing well. I try to keep up with as much as I can through Pastor Shawn's letters and devotionals. Thank you very, very much for the financial support you have given Isabel and I over the past few months. It has been very helpful to us as we continue the transition of being "newlyweds on our own."

I remember you in my prayers, and I ask God's blessing be upon you as you continue in your ministry and daily lives!

With love, Jim

We have welcomed two new students to our class since returning from Christmas break. They are both settling into the routine in our room & we look forward to getting to know them better.

We are feeling a little bit of cabin fever, as many people are this winter. We have gotten out to play a few times & look forward to more days before the snow melts. The children are eager to play on the boy snow piles at the corner of the parking lot!

We will be very busy over the next 3 months with our annual St. Patrick's Day & Easter celebrations, grandparents tea party, St. Jude's Trike-A-Thon, pet weeks, visits from Beaver Meadow, & Catt. County Public Health to talk about tooth brushing. All of these festivities will culminate with our graduation on Wednesday May 20th!

We anticipate your support at our Krolick's BBQ this spring, hopefully at the end of April.

Blessings,
Chris Kipfer , Director

Our preschoolers take advantage of some of the winter weather we've been getting.
